Ruyton Girls' School embarked on a major capital project to upgrade their facilities, requiring the temporary installation of classrooms, library space, and staff areas. With limited space available in the master plan and a desire to retain as much green space as possible, we sought a solution that would not only meet regulatory requirements but also provide a comfortable and conducive learning environment for students and a functional workspace for staff.

Our solution addressed all the client's requirements and challenges including the construction of temporary classrooms, meeting all fire safety regulations and providing a comfortable and modern learning environment. New library space was equipped with comfortable seating arrangements, and a new workspace for teachers, ensuring they have a functional office space to continue their administrative duties. TO create a centralized hub for various activities, we constructed a large deck connecting the classrooms.
